

ABSTRACT

This invention is directed towards ice skating and more particularly, the modification of an ice skate. The invention is comprised of a lower extended outsole intended for coping and/or striking other surfaces. A supporting member mates with and secures to a discontinuity in the blade and blade holder. The supporting member is intended for coping and/or striking other surfaces.